This course introduces you to the diverse social contexts of East Asian families. In this course, we will explore various social issues impacting families in East Asia (i.e., China, Taiwan, Korea, and Japan) such as global, economic, political, and cultural changes. In addition, how families interact with and influence their social contexts will be addressed. For example, you will learn the social and familial factors associated with low birth rate of East Asian countries. This course also provides you opportunities to explore the potential associations of your academic and/or personal interests with East Asian families.